

Theatre class continues to work on their dance piece to Aretha Franklin's "Think". They are finished learning the choreography and are now polishing up the routine. They are also rehearsing their improv scenes. After those are presented to their classmates, they will begin a reader's theatre piece, "The Giving Tree" by Shel Silverstein.

Spanish classes have learned about some cultural observations in Mexico during this time of year, and "Dia de los Muertos", which is widely celebrated in Mexico, as well as other parts of the Spanish-speaking world. In early November, we say, "Adios!" to our student teacher, Anna, as she moves on to her next placement. Gracias, Anna, y buena suerte! Through the autumn and the beginning of winter, our classes will focus on the culture of the Spanish speaking Caribbean, as well as continuing to learn to talk about ourselves and our experiences.

Our middle school classes will return to listening, listening, listening, as well as beginning a novel. Be sure to ask your student what they are reading in Spanish class, and a bit about the story it tells.

Studio Art students in Middle School have been creating Miniature Buildings that will be installed to create a whole work of art. We were inspired by this video about "The Gnomist" and more <https://www.youtube.com/watch?v=ZLoBWpiOczQ&t=382s>. We have an airport, a Teddy Bear factory, an Ice Cream shop and more! Elementary students will get a chance to visit our inspiring installation during their art time!

All monies collected will go towards helping Aldo Family members who are on a journey with cancer.

Music News

K-5 Music classes continue to work hard on rhythm and it's many applications in music. We are working on steady beat and grouping the bests into meter containing strong and weak beats. Music being its own language, has us busy reading, writing and clapping grade level appropriate rhythms. Quaver is our digital resource that we use in class and students enjoy being able to come up to the SMART Board and physically participate in class. As always we enjoy singing, dancing and instrument playing.
